

50-State Comparison: Education and Workforce Development Connections

Workforce Education and Training Financial Aid

October 2020

For the purpose of answering these questions, state statutes were examined.

Term Definitions:

Grant: Whether merit or need-based, money that the student does not have to repay. Some states use the term "scholarship" here.

Grant with employment/repayment stipulation: Money that the student does not have to repay as long as they complete the requirements of an agreement to work in a certain field and/or reside in the state for a set amount of time after leaving their postsecondary program.

Forgivable loan: Money is given to a student as a loan, but the student does not have to repay the loan if they work in a certain field and/or reside in the state for a set amount of time after leaving their postsecondary program.

Financial need: Money awarded based on a student's ability to pay, most commonly assessed by completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

Full time: Requires a student to enroll in a minimum of 12 credit hours per term or equivalent to be eligible.

Part time: Allows a student to enroll in fewer than 12 credit hours or equivalent per term to be eligible.

Overview:

States most often administer financial aid for workforce education and training as grants, rather than as loans or grants with post-graduation employment or residency requirements. The 50-state comparison also shows that most programs allow for full or part time enrollment, are not linked a maximum age or high school graduation date, and include a variety of sub-associate, associate, or, in some cases, bachelor level credentials. Several programs cover costs over the tuition and fees, providing students with additional dollars for books, supplies, or other indirect costs. Finally, several of the state policies require collaboration between state agencies to administer the program. Requiring a state workforce agency and the higher education agency to work together to identify the eligible high-need fields was the most common type of required collaboration.
